Understanding the Codex Vaticanus What is the Codex Vaticanus? The Codex Vaticanus is a Greek manuscript of the Christian Bible, believed to date from the early 4th century AD. from the preface many of us learn greek because we want the experience of reading the new testament in its original ancient language the vaticanus bible allows us to go one step further by offering us the experience of reading the greek new testament in one of its original ancient forms just like the ancients did as a language teacher i purpose to do whatever i can to bring my students face to face with the ancient world its language and its texts at the same time dealing with ancient primary sources can sometimes have a steep and intimidating learning curve this is especially the case when it comes to reading ancient manuscripts navigating hundreds of pages without chapter or verse numbers without spaces between words written in an unfamiliar script and peppered with unexpected spelling variants can be a real challenge for a beginner even for seasoned scholars reading ancient manuscripts is often restricted to a purely academic setting the idea that someone would carry around a facsimile of an ancient manuscript as their personal bible is as unthinkable as it is impractical such facsimiles are often as heavy as they are expensive i eventually came up with the idea that a facsimile of an ancient manuscript of the greek new testament should be made into an affordable handheld book with chapter and verse numbers in the margin to facilitate reading the vaticanus bible gospels is thus the first volume in what will hopefully become a series of such pseudo facsimile bibles □□□ □□□□ □□□□□□□□ such a volume could not have been produced without the help of a number of people and institutions i would like first of all to thank the center for the study of new testament manuscripts csntm org for generously supplying me with their images of the 1868 pseudo facsimile of codex vaticanus vat gr 1209 i would also like to thank kathryn mckee and st john s college at the university of cambridge for allowing me to make images of their copy of the 1868 pseudo facsimile which also aided me in the production of the present volume finally i would like to thank tyndale house library in cambridge for allowing me to consult their actual facsimile of codex vaticanus to help me best replicate the measurements of the original in the present volume as much as possible one who is familiar with codex vaticanus will find that the present volume exhibits three primary modifications and or differences from the original first the original codex contains three columns per page in the vaticanus bible each original page has been split into three so that only one column appears per page second chapter and verse numbers have been added in the outer margin of each page they do not intervene in the text third and finally the present volume is based on a pseudo facsimile rather than an actual facsimile though some readers may be discouraged to find out that they are not dealing with photographs of the original a comparison will quickly reveal that the resemblance of the pseudo facsimile to the original is remarkably close in fact the pseudofacsimile is even more authentic than codex vaticanus with respect to the absence of accents diacritics which were added by a later hand and not in the original fourth century manuscript at the time of publication recordings of this text in a historical koine pronunciation are being made available at koinegreek com ntaudio readers can thus round out their experience of reading the text as it would have been written in ancient times by hearing the text as it would have sounded in ancient times benjamin paul kantor ph d cambridge january 2020
